John Rose was born in a poor black township in South Africa. During apartheid, his family was forced to live in overcrowded and unsanitary conditions. Rose was often bullied by white children and suffered from low self-esteem.

Despite the challenges he faced, Rose was determined to get an education. He worked hard in school and eventually earned a scholarship to attend university. After graduating, Rose went on to become a successful businessman. He is now the founder and CEO of several companies, including a consulting firm and a property development company.

In addition to his business success, Rose is also a passionate advocate for social justice. He has spoken out against racism and poverty, and he has worked to improve the lives of disadvantaged children in South Africa.
